

RACS Project Conclusion

Lauren Fowler

Overall, I learned a lot while making this project. I learned how to create surveys with the use of Qualtrics, and how to formulate the questions so they are appropriate and easy for people to answer. I also learned a great deal about community service boards and why they were implemented in Virginia. Continually, through my research and the survey responses, I was able to get a deeper understanding of the mental health issues that are prevalent in the people of Virginia and how other CSBs are trying to combat these issues using various services.

If I were to continue looking into this project, I would want to conduct a state-wide survey, including all CSBs, to obtain more responses, as well as get a more accurate depiction of how people view the CSBs they have available to them. I think this would be helpful for CSBs to know and use for improvement and to get more on the same page in terms of what they may be able to offer.
